

The Affordability Conundrum: A Touchy Subject!!! Let's examine a sensitive topic that affects many individuals living in today's economy and marketplace.

Quality of Pug puppies varies corresponding to how well bred they are.

...And the breeder's ability to maintain standards set by AKC for the Pug breed and ancillary services provided to the AKC Pug puppy adoptors.

Pet ownership pride is a matter of quality love and satisfaction for life of pet at whatever we can afford. What we can afford is a personal matter of what we value and make plans for.

Breeders are well aware of their value of the Pug puppies they offer for adoption, along with a fee set by those breeders.

Pug Place Phoenix offers Pug puppies for adoption with a fee that is reasonable for services rendered, providing fair compensation for all costs incurred in the making of the puppy currently available for adoption, as well as all breeder services provided not only before but also after adoption.

Breeders do not compete with each other, they work together helping one another provide the very best Pug puppy for the adoptor at least cost within their ability to do so. What an adoptor can afford is a personal matter of what the adoptor values and makes plans for. The Breeders' set fees should not be undermined by the adoptors' affordability limitations. There are many fine Pugs seeking homes in Pug rescue organizations for those adoptors who must live within their means. Breeders also must live within their means.
